

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Media Contact: Matthew Rafalow
RLM pr
(212) 741-5106 x230
UniversalCalling@RLMpr.com

UNIVERSAL CALLING INTRODUCES CONFERENCECALLS.COM

Celebrates New Product Launch with Free Conference Calls

HOUSTON— November 6, 2006—Universal Calling, Inc., a global provider of long distance products and services, today launched a reservationless teleconferencing product at the Company's recently acquired Web destination, ConferenceCalls.com. To encourage new users to experience the value of ConferenceCalls.com each first-time user worldwide will receive free conference calling minutes.

This domestic and international teleconferencing product is available exclusively at ConferenceCalls.com, the new destination where customers can connect up to 50 conference call participants globally; receive extraordinary sound quality, reliable service; and find industry low rates. Customers have no need to change long distance carriers and can dial into calls from any location, phone or mobile device.

The ConferenceCalls.com teleconferencing product dramatically reduces telecom costs for individuals and businesses. Domestic calls only cost 2.7 cents per person per minute for national area codes and Web dial-out, and 3.7 cents per person per minute for toll free calling. With the Web dial-out feature, call participants do not even have to dial into a call; the system phones participants to grant access to a conference call. Web dial-out is available from any computer with Internet access.

Customers can now inexpensively host and participate in calls from outside of the United States, too. ConferenceCalls.com's international rates range up to 90 percent lower than those commonly available.

Calls are billed in one minute increments for connected calls, and sold at a single rate regardless of day or time. The offering is prepaid with no commitments, contracts, or hidden costs.

Each call participant receives a live conference room manager, active with every conference call. Customers can then access a wide variety of features including the innovative feature of recharging an account in real time while on a call. The manager includes a phonebook that stores up to 30 phone numbers for future use.

- more -

“Our acquisition of ConferenceCalls.com and the launch of our teleconferencing product are milestones for Universal Calling,” said the Company’s President, Rohit Krishan. “We are excited to mark this occasion with a unique free trial offer for all of our worldwide customers.”

In fact, ConferenceCalls.com will give 100 free minutes to any individual who is a first-time user of the product in the United States. Free conferencing minutes are available for international users as well. (The number of minutes available free to international users depends on the origin of the calls.)

Businesses are encouraged to make this offer available to their employees; there is no restriction on multiple users from the same company. This offer is good without purchase or credit card required.

ABOUT UNIVERSAL CALLING, INC. Universal Calling, Inc. is a global provider of long distance products and services that redefines the way, individuals and businesses communicate worldwide. Based in Houston, TX, the Company is renowned for providing its customers with the lowest cost, highest sound quality, and most reliable alternative to direct dialing without the hassle of changing phone service since 1997. The Company has more than 600 telecommunication brands, including CallingCards.com, CallingCard.com, Phonecards.com and ConferenceCalls.com. The Business Division of Universal Calling sells services ranging from trade show giveaways and bulk rates on calling cards and conferencing services to managing the telecom purchases of a global company. For more information, log on to www.universallcalling.com.